

Dr. Rich Hanowski is the Director of the Center for Truck & Bus Safety at the Virginia Tech Transportation Institute. Dr. Hanowski has been involved in transportation research since 1991 and has conducted many safety studies for government and industry. He is the author of more than 145 publications and currently serves as the Fatigue subject matter expert for the National Surface Transportation Safety Center for Excellence. More importantly, he is a native of Saskatoon, and a graduate of the University of Saskatchewan.

Today, he is going to discuss technological countermeasures to address driver fatigue in commercial vehicle operations.